Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to the questions from 17 to 20.

Scientists often meet and talk about animals in danger. Authorities in many countries are beginning to talk about this, too. They ask a lot of questions. Who can hunt dolphins and whales? How many of them can be killed every year? Can people buy rhino horns? Which animals are disappearing fastest? How can we protect them? These are just some of their questions.

So what can countries do? Here is one possible answer: They can open national parks. These are big and usually very beautiful wild places. Here, animals and birds can live freely, and they are also homes to trees and flowers. Visitors can go there and watch the animals, but they cannot hunt or take things away with them.

Authorities can do many things to protect the wildlife, and we can, too. Let's think about our lives, our work, our homes. Let's act immediately to make our world a better place for all living things.
